Official Describes Situation Of Refugees In Cuba

The difficult situation of 450 refugees who are presently detained in Tiscornia, the Ellis Island of Cuba, was described by Charles H. Jordan, Director of the Joint Relief Committee of Havana, in an interview at the offices of the Joint Distribution Committee in New York. Mr. Jordan has been in New York for a few days to consult with J.D.C. officers concerning the new problems affecting the status of some 6,000 refugees who have found asylum in Cuba. The Joint Relief Committee receives almost all of its funds from the J.D.C.

"Some 450 people, including over 100 children, are today in Tiscornia," Mr. Jordan declared. "Some of them have been there as long as two months. Cuban regulations have held them completely incommunicado. They were not permitted to receive visitors, to send or receive letters, or to use the telephone or telegraph.

"While it is understandable that the Cuban Government wishes to check very carefully on the identity of all enemy nationals entering Cuban territory, it cannot be overlooked that the situation of the refugees in Tiscornia is far from good. The food is not suitable for European palates, and the more than 130 Orthodox Jews among the refugees find it particularly difficult to get along. Among the refugees are also a number of pregnant women and aged people whose infirmities impose special hardships on them.

"Since the middle of May, the Joint Relief Committee of Havana has received exclusive permission to visit Tiscornia, and also to send United States food into the community kitchen. The committee has also set up an atmosphere of friendship, confidence and good faith between the association and the government.

"We are proud of the parts which the Government of the Dominican Republic and the Government of the United States have played," he said. "We are grateful for the development and the deeds that are being done in the present. And we are hopeful as we contemplate the future."

James N. Rosenberg, chairman of the association, host at the luncheon, said that it had been Mr. Warren's task to distinguish fairly between those who "saw in every wretched refugee a secret Hitler agent" and others who "pleaded for ever wider open doors in this country."

Other speakers included James G. McDonald, president of the President's Advisory Committee on Political Refugees, and Jesus Maria Troncoso, Dominican Minister to the United States.

Mrs. Warren, Mrs. Rosenberg, Senora de Troncoso and Mrs. Maurice Berck, daughter of Generalissimo Rafael L. Trujillo, President of the Dominican Republic were among the guests.

Orthodox Rabbi Gives Invocation In English Before U. S. House

Members of Congress who were in their seats when the House of Representatives met in Washington witnessed a rare sight — an Orthodox rabbi, garbed in the traditional robes of his faith, including the ceremonial cap, delivering the invocation.

Accompanied by Speaker Sam Rayburn, who introduced him, and Representative Arthur G Klein, Democrat, of New York, Rabbi Bernard Bergman, spiritual director of the Home of the Sons and Daughters of Israel of New York City, said a prayer in English.

Rabbi Bergman, as guest chaplain, was accompanied to the Speakers' rostrum by the Rev. James Shera Montgomery, chaplain of the House.

Rabbi Bergman is a member of the Orthodox Rabbis of the United States and author of several books.

Sosua Settlement Has 500 Refugees

Five hundred refugees for whom arrangements were made by the Dominican Republic Settlement Association, Inc., are now at the Sosua settlement in that country, Avra W. Warren, newly appointed United States Minister to the Caribbean Republic, said at a luncheon in his honor at the Lotos Club, 110 West Fifty-seventh Street.

Mr. Warren, who was formerly chief of the visa division of the State Department, said that he had found that the settling of the refugees at Sosua was "a miracle of organization."

A new ghetto of 10,000 people has been established in Opole, in the Lublin district. The ghetto is fenced in, and communication with the outer world is allowed only through special control points. The ghetto will receive food only in exchange for industrial and handicraft products supplied by the Jews.

Guerrilla Bands Give Goods To Needy Poles And Jews

The Nazis in Poland have announced an extensive campaign against the Jewish and Polish guerrilla fighters, who, they allege, are systematically attacking German military transports and warehouses where goods stolen from the Jews are kept. The practice of the guerrilla bands is to distribute the goods among needy Poles, and Jews in the ghettoes. In the Radom district, the Nazis seized a guerrilla band of Jews and Poles, which had captured from the Germans 5,000 metres of textiles, 12,000 raw skins, 340 kilogrammes of leather, 530 cattle, 360 pairs of boots, and 110,000 kilogrammes of flour and other foodstuffs.

Near Wilno, the Nazis captured a guerrilla band consisting of 18 non-Jews and three Jews, Isaac Kvitko, Isaac Shapiro, and David Eisenstadt. All the 18 members of the band were executed. The Nazi press admits that in the Bialystok district a considerable number of guerrilla bands, consisting of non-Jews and Jews, are very active, says the London Jewish Chronicle.

In order to terrorize patriots the Nazis have set up gallows in public places in 18 towns in Polish Silesia, as a warning to Jews and Poles that anyone showing resistance will be publicly executed. Nevertheless, the activities of the guerrilla bands increase daily.

Thirty-six Jews in Cracow have been sentenced to terms of imprisonment varying from one to three years for disobeying the curfew order and being out in the street after 7 p.m. The accused pleaded in court that it was for

Jews In Greece Endure Most From Nazis

Among twelve members of a guerrilla band captured by Axis troops and executed in Greece were four Jews from Salonika. The members of the band were accused of repeated attacks on Axis troops and looting of Axis military transports.

It is reported that the Greek guerrilla bands include a considerable proportion of Jews, who show great skill in harassing the invaders. Jews are among the worst sufferers of the Nazi invasion. No fewer than 7,300 Jews, including about 3,000 children under 14, are said to have died from hunger in Greece since the Axis occupation. And the death rate is growing rapidly.

In Salonika alone, the average daily number of deaths of Jews from hunger has reached 50. About 50 per cent of these are children under ten. The Municipality of Salonika has tried its best to avoid discrimination against Jews in the city's soup kitchens, but the Nazis

Italy Calls Up 5,000 Jews For Work On Roads And Rivers

Five thousand Jews in Italy have been called up "on the strength of the civil mobilization law to do certain work," the German radio said in a dispatch from Rome quoting an official Italian announcement. "Part of them," the announcement said, "will be employed a railway workers in the provinces of Brescia and Perugia, others as road workers in central Italy and some for regulating rivers in the provinces of Rome, Rovigo and Verona."

The Italian Government has decreed that all Jews, aged 17 to 50, including even those exempted from the Jew-laws, are liable to be enrolled in forced labor units. Instructions have been issued to all prefects to expedite the calling up of Jews for labor service, and to send for trial by military tribunals any Jew trying to evade it.

The Spanish Government has issued a decree providing for the dissolution of all Jewish religious institutions in the country (mainly in Madrid and Barcelona). The decree provides for the closing down of Synagogues and communal offices, and for the confiscation of communal property. The heads of the Jewish communities have had to pledge not to continue their Jewish religious activities in the future.

A huge gap between the potential ability of American Jews to support overseas rescue and relief work, rebuilding in Palestine, and aid to refugees in the United States, and their actual contributions to the United Jewish Appeal for Refugees, Overseas Needs and Palestine, is revealed in a new book by Professor Eli Ginzberg, of Columbia University, "A Report To American Jews On Overseas Relief, Palestine And Refugees In The United States." It is based on Professor Ginzberg's report as Director of Research of the 1941 Allotment Committee of the United Jewish Appeal.

The impressive rescue and reconstruction record of the Joint Distribution Committee, United Palestine Appeal and National Refugee Service, constituent agencies of the United Jewish Appeal, has been achieved in spite of the fact that the funds raised by the U.J.A. fell far short of the essential requirements and are only a fraction of what American Jews could give, Professor Ginzberg finds.

Professor Ginzberg in his emphasis on the wartime significance of the work of the Joint Distribution Committee, United Palestine Appeal and National Refugee Service. He declares that "to succor the victims of Hitler and to strengthen the bulwarks against Hitler have long been the major objectives of the constituent organizations of the United Jewish Appeal, and there is surely no better time to strengthen the work of these organizations than when the United States is at war with Hitler."

Urging that the needs and importance of the three agencies be brought home forcefully to American Jews "by all possible educational methods," Professor Ginzberg declares: "Nor can there be much doubt that as American Jews become more aware of these opportunities for helping others they will be glad to participate more actively and contribute more liberally to these organizations. And to the extent that this occurs they will themselves become better Jews, better Americans, better citizens of the world."

Palestine Police Offer Rewards For Detection Of Bomb Perpetrators

They are described in the announcement as "members of an organization responsible for attempts on the lives of the Inspector-General of Police and the Assistant Inspector-General."

Yitzchak Zelnik, one of the wanted men, surrendered to the police in Haifa after reading the announcement in the press. It is reported that a second man has also given himself up.

the Cuban immigration department to have their transit or tourist visas renewed. As holders of resident status, they may now start small businesses, work as domestics, or in those industries where their special skills can be utilized.

Mr. Jordan made a special plea to American relatives of the Tiscornia refugees for understanding of the situation.

"Our office is making every effort to relieve the difficulties under which the refugees in Tiscornia exist," he said. "One of our representatives spends three or four full days a week in Tiscornia taking messages from the internees to be sent to their relatives, and arranging for transmission of money which may be sent for them from America. It must be understood that a stay in Tiscornia is not free. The minimum charge made by the immigration authorities is $1.00 a day per person for food and lodging. No refugee may be released from Tiscornia until he has paid that charge, plus any extra charges which he may have incurred as a result of staying at better accommodations, plus medical examination and documentary fees. Relatives should always make the necessary funds available if the refugee himself is not in possession of them. Particularly at the point of release, sufficient funds for payment of all fees should be available. Each day that the refugee remains in Tiscornia means additional charges."

This situation has been explained to the refugees in Tiscornia, Mr. Jordan stated. The representative of the Joint Relief Committee constantly interprets the situation and reassures the refugees.

Refugees continue to emigrate from Havana to the United States. In recent weeks, over 13 refugees in Tiscornia received their American visas. Because of their inability to communicate with the American Consulate, the Joint Relief Committee had to act as intermediary, and act as an escort for the refugees during their trip to the American Consulate in Havana.

Yiddish Dramatist Dies

Wrote Fifty Plays

Anshel Schorr, Yiddish playwright and theater manager, who was lessee and managing director of the Arch Street Theatre in Philadelphia from 1912 to 1927, died in the Beth Israel Hospital, Stuyvesant Park, New York, which he entered two weeks ago after more than a year of ill health. He was 70 years old.

Born in Zlatcznow, Poland, Oct. 25, 1871, the son of a Talmud teacher, Mr. Schorr attended the Yeshivos School in Lemberg and would have followed his father's desire and become a rabbi had he not early shown a yearning for the theatre.

[illegible] Metropolitan Theatre, Newark, N. J., 1908-09, was stage director for Jacob P. Adler at the Thalia Theatre, this city, 1910-11; leased and managed the Liberty Theatre, Brooklyn, 1927-28; toured Europe, 1928-30; managed the McKinley Square Theatre, this city, 1931, and toured South America, 1932-34.

Mr. Schorr wrote nearly fifty plays, the best known being "A Mensh Zoll Men Zein," 1900, which has been produced in Europe and South America as well as this country. Other titles are "Die Amerikaner in," "Shir Hashirim," "Women Men Forget," "Molly Darling," "One In A Million," and "Girl Wanted." For many of the Joseph Rumshinsky musical productions he wrote the librettos. His songs included "Yiddish Lied," (The Song of the Jew).

In 1921 Mr. Schorr married Dora Weissman, well-known Yiddish actress who also has played important roles in English, recently appearing on Broadway in Elmer Rice's "Two On An Island," and Norman Krasna's "The Man With The Blonde Hair." She survives. The Schorr home is at 605 137th Street.

The Thrill That Comes Once In A Life Time

Brooklyn Family Hears Son on Chungking Radio

[illegible] were left forgotten on the dining-room table in a home at 1788-A East Third Street, Brooklyn, as the voice of Sidney Landesberg, twenty-eight years old, came blurred and indistinct in a broadcast from Chungking, China.

Crowded around the radio were the American soldier's father, Samuel Landesberg, fifty-two, a novelty manufacturer; Sidney's mother, Mrs. Fanny Landesberg; his brother, Herbert, seventeen; his sister, Ada, twenty-four, and the girl he loves, Stephanie Fink, twenty-one, of 1895 Townsend Avenue, the Bronx. All of them were weeping and laughing and exclaiming.

"That's Sid; he's wonderful," said Miss Fink. "Those Japs will be annihilated." Then she ran into another room and shut the door. They were to have been married Jan. 2, the day Sidney was sent to an undisclosed destination. In her hand Miss Fink was holding a cable message the family received which said: "Am all right. How is every one? Listen to War Department broadcast May 31. Tell Stephie answer. Sid."

"I cry all the time for my Sidney," Mrs. Landesberg said, "but I'm proud of him. It wouldn't be so bad if he'd stay in one place. But he moves around so much I worry."

"Since my boy left, my heart goes faster," remarked Mr. Landesberg. "I have to take drops; I have to see the doctor every two weeks. I never gave a damn before."

No one could understand what Sidney was saying. That didn't matter. It was his voice coming over the thousands of miles that mattered.

have introduced special hours for the Jews after the feeding hours of the non-Jews. As a result, Jews find that by the time they arrive scarcely any food is left for them. Jewish soup kitchens are able to provide only 3,800 meals daily, a number totally inadequate to meet the needs of the large number of starving Jews.

The Red Cross, too, is prevented by the Nazis from distributing among the Jews anything like the amount of food to which they are proportionately entitled from the supplies recently sent to Greece.

Sixty Reform Rabbis Assail Zionist And Congress Platforms

Sections of the platforms of the extraordinary conference for Zionist affairs and the emergency conference of the American Jewish Congress were attacked at Atlantic City at a meeting of some sixty non-Zionist Reform rabbis.

This included the demands for the organization of a Jewish fighting force in Palestine under its own flag, free Jewish immigration into Palestine under the sole control of the Jewish agency, and the establishment of Palestine as a Jewish commonwealth.

"As responsible teachers in Israel and men who have dedicated our lives to the faith of Israel", Dr. Morris A. Lazaron, of Baltimore, said, "we have not only the right but the duty to consider our stand not only on the practical aspects of the Congress-Zionist claims but also on the wisdom and wholesomeness and truth of their philosophy. We cannot by our silence seem to give consent to those things we reject. There are those who look in us for guidance. Before them, our own conscience and our fellow-Americans we must speak the truth as we see it on these vital issues.

"The resolutions of the Zionist congress meetings reveal inconsistencies which are hard to reconcile. They proclaim unreserved support of the United Nations, yet continue to agitate for a Jewish army. They declare for co-operation with the Arabs, but demand that the Jewish agency have full control of immigration. They deny nationalism for the Jews, but demanding international status for the Jewish people, call upon Jews who are citizens of other countries to work for a political goal related to a land other than their own. No stable future for the Jew in Palestine or anywhere else can be built on such foundations.

"While I understand the utter despair that breeds nationalism in Jewish life, it makes me sick at heart to contemplate that the people which gave the world its universal dream are urged to turn its back upon its greatest gift at the very moment in history when the free people of the world are united in an epic struggle to preserve that dream."

ANNOUNCEMENT

For another week Montrealers can enjoy a really amazing floor show at Chez Maurice. Mischa Auer acts as accompanist for his wife, the beautiful star of radio, Joyce Hunter, singing some of the popular ballads. Beside being the Mischa Auer of screen fame, this versatile comedian makes a bow as a composer, with a song called "Every Once In A While" which he wrote especially for his wife. Mischa Auer's repertoire includes playing the piano with two grapefruit. The master of ceremonies is Rod Rodgers; there are a pair of pretty acrobatic dancers; the Harmonicats, three young men who sound like a complete orchestra, playing mouth-organs; a lively line-up of chorus girls, and music by Harry Gelfand. The new policy at the Chez Maurice is to have at least one outstanding personality of stage, screen, or radio in every production. Marquette 4114 is the telephone of this popular night club.

MARRIAGES

Aronson-Leitman

The marriage of Sylvia, daughter of Mrs. M. Leitman, Dollard Avenue, and the late Mr. Leitman, to Louis, son of Mrs. S. J. Aronson, and the late Rev. Aronson, took place on Sunday, May 24th, at Chevra Kadisha Synagogue, Rabbi Julius Berger officiating. The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Allen Leitman. She wore a long white sheer gown, with a sweetheart neckline, and long sleeves coming to points over the hands. Her tiara of orange blossoms held her veil in place at the back and fell over the front of her dress to the dropped waistline, from which fell her long train. A tiara embroidered in seed pearls caught up a long white veil of embroidered tulle illusion, which extended the length of her train. Her bouquet was of roses and lilies-of-the-valley. Her sister, Miss Millie Leitman, sister of the bride, was maid-of-honor, wearing a long-waisted, long, white, crepe dress, studded with gold stars, and made with a sweetheart neckline and short sleeves. She had a gold veil caught at the top with yellow snapdragons, and her bouquet was of yellow, mauve and pink snapdragons. Florence Peters, niece of the groom, was flower girl, and she wore a long, white bouffant skirt, with a short bodice, and two white bows in her hair. Her bouquet was of roses. The best man was Jack Kanofsky. A reception followed in the community hall, the bride's mother wearing a long black crepe dress, with long sleeves, and a black hat, trimmed with blue veiling and blue and rose flowers, and a corsage of tea roses; and the groom's mother wearing navy blue matelasse crepe, with a navy blue hat to match, and a corsage of Tea roses. She wore a long-waisted, long, white satin dress, cut on princess lines, and buttoned down the back, with long sleeves, and a sweetheart neckline edged in net ruching. At Least 200,000 Jews Killed By Hitler's Agents, Is Estimate

MASS-GRAVE TECHNIQUE NECESSARY AFTER HORRIBLE SLAUGHTER

Adolf Hitler's agents, in the most terrible racial persecution in modern history, have killed at least 200,000 Jews in Russia, Poland and the Baltic states and have driven millions of Jews from their homes into medieval ghettos, writes Joseph W. Grigg, former correspondent in Berlin, in the New York Herald Tribune.

Foreign correspondents in Germany were never able to get exact figures of the dead, for the Jews were killed so indiscriminately that no records were kept. Thousands lie in unmarked graves, many in mass graves they were forced to dig before the firing squads of Schutz Staffel (Elite Guard) troops cut them down.

Der Fuehrer, on Jan. 30, 1939, declared that another world war would result in destruction of the Jews, and those of us who lived in Germany knew that he and his agents have done everything possible to make the prophecy come true.

From Germany proper, Jews are still being deported into already-overcrowded ghettos in occupied countries at the rate of 20,000 a month. There apparently was an effort to creat a "Jew-free" Reich by last April 1, as a birthday gift for Hitler (who was fifty-three years old April 20), but, owing to transportation and other difficulties, the schedule could not be maintained. It is estimated that 60,000 to 70,000 have been dumped in Eastern Europe since September.

One of the principal known mass slaughters occurred in Latvia last summer when, responsible Nazi sources admitted, 56,000 Jewish men, women and children were killed by S. S. troops and Latvian irregulars. The slaughter went on for days and there was even a German official present of squads shooting Jews in the streets of Riga. The Nazi commentator described the scenes as a vengeance of "the infuriated Latvian populace against the Jews," but a remarkable feature was that the "Latvians" all wore German army helmets.

In Lithuania, about 30,000 Jews, according to the most reliable estimates, were killed by special "clean-up" squads brought from Poland with the knowledge and approval of the German civil administration. The entire Jewish population of many towns and villages was driven into the country, forced to dig graves and then machine-gunned. In one city alone, more than 2,000 were killed. At Kaunas the executions were not so sweeping, owing to the militant opposition of the Catholic church, and in Estonia, last of the Baltic states to fall to Hitler, comparatively few Jews were executed.

The slaughter in Poland was terrible, with 20,000 persons killed in reprisal for the alleged killing of 58,000 minority Germans at the outbreak of the war. Many of the slain were Poles, but there was a high percentage of Jews. The mass-grave technique was used there, too.

The German advance into Russia was accompanied by a slaughter of Jews, especially in the Ukraine. The Germans tried to shift the blame to the Ukrainians. When Kiev was occupied, any Jew seen on the street was shot. One German rifleman boasted to newspaper correspondents that he had killed thirty-seven in one night, picking them off as a hunter does rabbits. Rumanians were even less reticent in boasting of their slaughtering of Jews.

Maybe you think your small change cannot help: is that "total war" means "somebody else."

Maybe you're one of the thousands of housewives who haven't yet started to put even 50¢ a week into War Savings Stamps—just a neutral . . .

There aren't any neutrals in this war! You're a help or a hindrance to victory. You can't get out of it. If you spend thoughtlessly you'll deny our fighting forces the arms they need and imperil your own future. If you—and 2,000,000 other housewives in Canada—put only 50¢ a week into War Savings Stamps, it means $1,000,000 a week to help win the war. Which side are you on?

Buy War Savings Stamps from banks, post offices, druggists, grocers and other retail stores.

McKim's New Directory Of Canadian Publications Is Out

Chinese dailies are still the most numerous in Canada's foreign language group, there being two in Toronto and two in British Columbia, while suspension of the two Japanese dailies leaves only one publication, a weekly, in this tongue.

The group totals 66, in 16 different languages. Canada now has a total of 1,811 publications, of which 107 are dailies and 953 weeklies. This is five fewer dailies and 31 fewer weeklies than last year, the overall increase of three being accounted for by 20 additional monthlies and 23 additional miscellaneous publications. The above figures, are from the 35th edition of McKim's Directory of Canadian Publications, just off the press, comprising 483 pages and including exhaustive data on markets throughout the Dominion.

"Since the last war," says C. T. Pearce, president of A. McKim Limited, in a foreword, "the techniques of advertising have undergone a revolution. Developed and burnished in the service of industry and business during the years that have elapsed, the tools and methods of advertising have been applied with a new skill and comprehensiveness to the tasks of war." Of advertising in its normal functions, he says: "Those who, with their eyes on the post-war world, take the necessary steps to maintain and increase the goodwill created by consistent advertising will find themselves in the best position to cope with circumstances when peace comes."

A Great Jew Who Disregarded Personal Safety To Do Heroic Work In Refugee Aid

By Joseph C. Hyman, Executive Vice-Chairman, Joint Distribution Committee

A cable was received in our office the other day. It came from Lisbon. Here is what it said: "Regret advise Spitzer our representative in Yugoslavia passed away under tragic circumstances."

Sime Spitzer did not have to die. Had he wanted to, he could have escaped many times over from his native Yugoslavia before the Germans marched in last spring. But he stuck to his post like so many other heroic European Jews who disregard all thought of personal safety in their loyalty to their fellow Jews. These men, and women, too, are among the greatest assets of the J.D.C. To know and work with them is a high privilege.

Sime Spitzer was a Belgrade Jewish businessman and intellectual — in Europe the two are often combined — of whom any description would include the word "prominent." He had a very successful business in provisions, was regarded as one of the leading Zionists in Southeastern Europe, had access to the royal palace, was respected and looked up to.

Like many other people, Sime Spitzer fled because Hitler came to power in Germany. When his own country began to absorb refugees, and all the problems that went with them, Sime Spitzer threw himself into the work of helping them. He took the unpaid job of Secretary General of the Jewish Community in Belgrade, one of the groups through which the Joint Distribution Committee carried out its refugee aid programs in Yugoslavia.

A piece of modern Jewish history was interwoven in Sime Spitzer's life. In December, 1939, one thousand men, women and children, refugees from Austria and Czechoslovakia, had begun a voyage down the Danube river which came to an abrupt halt at the Yugoslavian town of Kladovo as winter ice jammed the waterway. With the help of the J.D.C., the refugee committee in Zagreb was able to bring immediate relief to these people.

By the time the Danube was again open to navigation in the spring, political developments in the Balkans had created obstacles which prevented the refugees from continuing on their journey. They had to remain aboard the boat. By June, the intense summer heat threatened to cause an epidemic on the overcrowded vessel. The Zagreb committee made representations to the Yugoslav authorities to remove the refugees from the boat. The authorities gave their permission but on the condition that the committee would support the refugees.

Throughout these negotiations Sime Spitzer played a central role. When the refugees were finally taken off the boat, he was on hand at Kladovo to supervise the building of tents and other makeshift quarters to house them. At the end of August, 1940, new troubles beset the harassed group. Soviet Russia's occupation of Bessarabia had forced out large numbers of Germans who had been living in that territory. When they were given asylum in Yugoslavia, Kladovo became one of the centers for their care. The Jewish refugees had to be removed to an abandoned factory in the town of Sisatac.

In November, arrangements were made by the J.D.C. for the refugees who had received Palestine certificates to continue their journey. Some of them had already boarded small boats to carry them to a steamship when their departure was suddenly cancelled because the lower Danube had frozen over earlier than expected. The "Kladova" group was forced to spend another winter at Shabac. In March of last year, when the Danube ice melted, they did resume their journey, about 50 at a time, using an overland route through Turkey and Syria to Palestine, their fare paid by the J. D. C. But not all escaped. The last groups was known to have departed from Yugoslavia a few days before the German invasion.

Yugoslav Jews, numbering about 70,000, were not a particularly prosperous community; but they shared with the J.D.C. the financial burden of caring not only for the "Kladova" group, but also for 1,600 refugees maintained in seven camps. From time to time they were confronted with unexpected problems. One of these took the shape of 512 refugee passengers of the SS Pencho—another ill-starred boat which spent two months in Yugoslav waters before it set out on a Palestine - bound journey which ended on the reefs of an Italian island in the Mediterranean. While the boat was in Yugoslavia, the local community, aided by J.D.C. funds, helped its passengers. Today, the Pencho group is approaching the end of its second year on the Island of Rhodes. The J.D.C. was able, through its Italian Jewish committee, to bring them some help.

During that second winter of war, many were the problems that beset Sime Spitzer and his refugee committee. Not only did they have to take care of the refugees who had legally come to Yugoslav, but they were constantly receiving newcomers who crossed the border from Hungary. These persons, who had sought refuge in Hungary either from Germany, Poland or Czechoslovakia, were uncomfortable in the increasingly Axis-oriented atmosphere of Hungary. They feared deportation to their homelands or imprisonment. Hundreds therefore found their way to the Yugoslavian border and made night crossings. Spitzer organized reception centers on the Yugoslavian side of the border and provided accommodations for these penniless people, who had fled with only the clothing on their backs, in the refugee camps which had been set up in Yugoslavia.

There was a great deal of heart-breaking work to do in Yugoslavia after the Germans had completed their occupation. Ruthless bombings had left many people dead; many others homeless. Thousands of Jews, knowing what was in store for them under German domination, had fled either to Bulgaria and thence to Turkey and Palestine, or to Herzegovina and thence to Italy.

The "new order" brought mass executions, imprisonment, forced labor, expropriation and numerous other forms of persecution. Yugoslavia was split ruthlessly into two principal parts: Croatia and Serbia. In each the plight of the remaining Jews rivaled description. Of the 68,000 Jewish men, women and children who only a year ago constituted the Jewish community of Yugoslavia, there are probably no more than 25,000 or 30,000 left on Yugoslav soil.

Despite these and other fearful handicaps, Sime Spitzer in Serbia and Alexander Klein in Croatia lost no time in reconstituting the work of the refugee committees in their respective areas. When, prior to America's entry into the war, they found that it was impossible for the J.D.C. to send them direct help because their country was occupied, they were able to work out a form of clearance which made funds available internally. When, after Pearl Harbor, they found that not even clearances could be continued because American laws forbade any communication with enemy-occupied lands, they accepted cheerfully the pledge of the J.D.C. that if they could raise sufficient funds internally to continue the work, the J.D.C. would repay the debts arising out of those operations after the war. Throughout all of this Sime Spitzer was the directing force. He continued to be the moving spirit of the refugee aid work in Belgrade, even after the Germans imprisoned him. Because so many people came to the prison to consult him, the Germans arranged to set him free each day to go to the office of the committee, and each night they took him back to his cell.

Long before the Germans invaded Yugoslavia, Sime Spitzer was urged by some of his friends to leave that country. It was pointed out to him that should Yugoslavia be invaded, he would be one of the first victims of the Nazis because of his prominence in Jewish life. But Spitzer laughed it all off, for he was a man of courage and of loyalty.

He did insist that his wife leave Yugoslavia, and after the invasion she together with two of her three children managed to find their way to Palestine, where the J.D.C. is helping to take care of them. The fate of a third child, a boy of 13, is unknown. He had remained in Yugoslavia with his father.

Sime Spitzer was more than a man—he was a symbol. There are many like him in Europe today. Already someone has taken his place in Belgrade. The existence of these heroic and self-sacrificing men and women is something for which we should be profoundly grateful. Were it not for them, we should have to write off, in the books of Jewish life, more than 5,000,000 Jewish souls on the dark continent today.

"Sometimes when people censure me,
I tell them without rancor
That for what it cost me to be free,
I might have had an anchor."

Several years ago, before the adoption of anti-Semitism as a state policy by Italy and before the foreign Jews who had been welcomed there were plundered and expelled, a ceremony took place in Rome to name a street after an American Jew, in conjunction with the opening of the spring session of the Permanent Committee of the International Institute of Agriculture of which that Jew was the founder. He was the late David Lubin, a man whose story is known to few; his daughter had come from the United States on the invitation of Baron Acerbo, head of the Institute; the Governor of Rome took part in the proceedings. Five years before, the representatives of seventy governments had observed the twenty-fifth anniversary of the founding of the institute which is a clearing house for international statistics on farm products, and within which collaboration by all countries is intended to solve basic economic problems.

David Lubin was born in Poland to a family of poverty. When he was four days old the wick of a Sabbath candle fell on his face, inflicting a burn. The rabbi comforted his parents. David had been marked by God and would grow up to be a servant of the Lord. He would sit in the high places and influence kings. This prediction must have impressed the child's mother greatly for the son carried with him to his death the idea that he had been consecrated to the service of humanity. He was brought to America as a little child and although he received practically no education, his mother taught him the moral obligations of a Jew and inspired him with a sense of majesty in having been born a Jew. She was the greatest influence in his life for she was able to communicate her own spirituality to her son's receptive nature.

One of Lubin's earliest jobs was in Attleboro, Massachusetts, where he dipped chains in a jewelry factory. He left it when the foreman stole an idea he had for improving the manufacturing process. He drifted along, finally reaching Arizona where he worked on a ranch among frontiersmen whose daily life was a practical application of American democracy in their codes and ways. It was a strange jump from a ranch to the clothing business in San Francisco. Anyway, Lubin disliked the clothing business because it involved haggling, the common method of dealing at that time. His next venture was as an overall merchant in Sacramento where he went with merchandise obtained in San Francisco on credit. His first sales room was over a Chinese laundry and his sign which read: "D. Lubin, one price," is supposed to be the first one price declaration to be hung out west of the Mississippi River. With his partner and half-brother, Harry Weinstock, he became successful.

Lubin's life might have remained much the same as many another Jewish merchant who established himself in America on a reputation of hard work and honest dealings, except for important differences of character and aspiration. He had by his side a brother who shared his ideas and gave him companionship and moral support in carrying them out. When the brothers grew successful they did not become smug and look for time to kill. Business success was an aim but not the only goal. The two brothers went in for self-education and study to make up for what they had missed from childhood on. They were hungry for knowledge and their keen, mature minds absorbed it with intelligent appreciation. But their intention was not to become people of polish and culture merely for their own self-improvement. A motivating factor in their self-training was the drive to the service of humanity with which David Lubin had been imbued in his younger years. The brothers expected to place their abilities at the benefit of as widening a circle of people as they could.

Lubin's opportunity came through the fact of his business dealing with farmers. The situation of the fruit growers seemed to require help because they were compelled to pay too much to the commission dealers who handled their products. Lubin took a trip to Europe and when he returned he had with him the idea of forming a fruit growers' union. He agitated against high railroad freight rates and the cheaper transportation costs which he effected resulted in the parcel post system. With his idea of an international agricultural institute Mr. Lubin went to Washington, England, France, without making headway, and finally to Italy where a short, formal audience with King Victor Emmanuel was arranged. But Lubin and the King were two plain-spoken, rugged men together, they liked each other and talked together for hours. Later at the King's invitation, fifty-five nations appropriated money for the International Institute of Agriculture which for years has demonstrated how nations can work together for constructive benefit to all.

Times have changed. Neither an American Jew, whether born in Poland or not, nor any other American, for that matter, would be honored in Italy today, although Mussolini was in power when the memory of David Lubin was honored. Mussolini has changed, for he himself used to honor Jews for their various exploits and accomplishments. The Roman Empire he wishes to revive seems to have changed. In the new Empire there is the Fascist code which defines a Jew as one born of Jewish parents, or of a Jewish father and a foreign mother, or of mixed marriage but professing the Jewish religion. Therein lies a great point of difference with the old Roman Empire.

In the year C.E. 60 the Jerusalem authorities had arrested a man from Tarsus named Saul or Paul and were getting ready to scourge him. He said he was a Jew, educated in Jerusalem "at the feet of Gamaliel according to the law of the fathers." At the last moment Paul asked the centurion if it was lawful to lash a Roman citizen. The centurion hurried to tell the chief captain that the prisoner claimed to be a Roman citizen. The captain, investigating for himself, seems to have been curious. "'Tell me,' he said 'art thou a Roman?' He said, 'Yea.' And the chief captain answered, 'With a great sum obtained I this freedom.' And Paul said, 'But I was born free.'" In other words, Paul's ancestors had probably been Roman citizens for generations, whereas the chief captain who was the boss of the centurion with the whip was an alien who had paid a lot of money for his Roman citizenship.

Today Mussolini is copying a man to whom "Civis Romanus sum" would be meaningless coming from a Jew, even one whose ancestors had lived in the country hundreds of years ago. The idea of Mussolini's racial policy, besides showing solidarity with his ally, seems to be to make Italian Jews hostages for the good behavior of Jews in the democratic countries in view of the "conspiracy" of world "Hebrewism" against the Fascist state. He has probably changed the name of the street dedicated to David Lubin, the American Jew born in Poland. But with all those measures it is doubtful whether the Empire he dreams of will last the hundreds of years that the old Roman Empire, so unguarded about Jewish citizenship, lasted after the Jew Paul said: "But I was born free."

Fear Is A Bad Counsellor

Under the heading of "An Historic Blunder," the Jewish Chronicle, of London, England, says:

In our issue of April 24, 1919, the then editor of The Jewish Chronicle, the late L. J. Greenberg, writing under the pseudonym of "Mentor" in the weekly causerie which he contributed without a break for some twenty-five years, gave expression to some truly prophetic views on the subject of Bolshevism. A few lines of what he said, torn from the context and usually more or less falsified, have repeatedly been employed by scurrilous Jew-baiters. The actual words were:

> "The ideals of Bolshevism at many points are consonant with the finest ideals of Judaism, some of which went to form the basis of the best teachings of the founder of Christianity . . . It is the thoughtless one who looks upon Bolshevism only in the ugly repulsive aspects which all the social revolutions assume and which make it so hateful to the freedom-loving Jew."

Now the Morning Post was at that time in its anti-Jewish phase. The paper had been running a rather malicious "Jews and Bolsheviats" campaign and had called upon Jews to dissociate themselves publicly from Bolshevism. After the appearance of the "Mentor" article, ten of the leaders of the Community, their better judgment blinded by panic, complied with the Morning Post's request in a formal letter dissociating themselves not only from Bolshevism but from the far-seeing "Mentor" article referred to.

In their innocence they no doubt believed that they had scotched, if not destroyed, a serious danger. But they were soon to discover that all they had succeeded in doing was to walk into what proved to be a most unfortunate trap. Jew-baiters fastened on their letter, and up and down the country it became the stock-in-trade of their speeches and writings. In later years it was taken up by Mosley and his followers, and everywhere that extract from the article was held up as the confession, confirmed by the subsequent letter from leading Jews themselves, that Jews were Bolshevists and Bolshevists were Jews. Qui s'excuse s'accuse was never more painfully illustrated.

Twelve days ago—twenty-three years after the "Mentor" article had occasioned ten Jews' folly — the new Primate, preaching in Manchester Cathedral in support of a Religion and Life movement, made this statement, as quoted in The Times: "He (the Archbishop of Canterbury) did not see anything incompatible between economic Communism and Christianity. It was only a historical accident that Communism had been associated in any way with Atheism." Now we can ask, is there anything incompatible between the Archbishop's remark and that of The Jewish Chronicle writer which has been so gleefully exploited by anti-Jews?

But, of course, there is no hue and cry today against Dr. Temple's sane and accurate remarks—"autres temps autres moeurs". True prophets have traditionally to bear the stones of those to whom they preach, and The Jewish Chronicle is far too old to be surprised or grieved at the fate or to rejoice at the confirmation of events. But we have the right to point the moral of these incidents to those of our own household who are ready to rush in with panic-stricken disclaimers which can be twisted into "confessions" every time some grave charge or unpleasant generalization is levelled against their people.

Today we frequently encounter honest non-Jewish well-wishers of the Community who, in their pure desire to protect it from attack, urge Jewish leaders to pose in the white sheet. Our communal guides should stand firm against this friendly pressure, as against their own fears. They have their warning in the misguided zeal of their predecessors of twenty-three years ago, which has had such deplorable results. Fear, like anger, is a bad counsellor.
